TREY TEACH NEW YORK A LESSON

In the Manner in Which to Enjoy a Holiday at the State's Expense.

THEY SING THEIR LITTLE CHORUSES

and Cause Even President Harrison to Guge in Amas ment at Them. From their reserved seats opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel in New York yestertay the members of the Pennsylvania Legalature gave an exhibition of the clown work they have been so assiduously rehearsing the present session. Their concerted spelling of the name of their State and their manner of informing their favorites the they are all right, brought forth thunder of applause from the crowds.

IFROM A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.1 NEW YORK, April 30 .- The Pennsylvania Legislature sat to-day on the observation stand opposite the Fifth Avenue Hotel. The Connectiont Legislature sat beside them, in the shadow of the big but tawdry and flimsy arch that spanned the avenue at that point. The Legislators were nearly all in place by 10 A. M., and did not begin to leave until after 4 P. M. Some remained until after 6. A few came later. Senator Cooper was applauded when he arrived. He raised his hat and kissed his hand in response. Hon. John Rose, of Cambria, also received a hearty greeting, and when Lieutenant Governor Davies, Secretary of the Commonwealth Stone, and the Governor's handsome private secretary, George Pearson, arrived the handelapping was long and

The day was a very pleasant one. The earlier portion was cloudy and cool. Later the sun came out, and many of the Legislators are red and bronzed from its effect. It was just I o'clock when the President and his party passed the Fifth Avenue Hotel. HONORED BY HARRISON.

The windows were filled with the wives and other lady relatives of distinguished people, but when the Pennsylvania Legislaters cheered and vociferously spelled out the name of their State the President ignored the waving handkerchiefs of the ladies and the applianding crowds across the way, and standing up in his carriage, turned his whole attention to the represenfatives of the Keystone Commonwealth, to whom he made a series of elaborate bows as his carriage passed. The Pennsylva-nians had been practicing on spelling the name of their State in a chorus during the morning's wait, and had it down fine when the President passed.

When the windows of the hotel first filled up, and the balcony, freshly erected in front of the second story, was decorated with the fair sex, they made their first attempt of the day and were granted a hearty round of ap-plause. They captured the attention of every one, wherever they tried it.

President Harrison lost something intended wholly for his benefit when he turned his back on the beauties in the Fifth Avenue windows and balconies to bow to the vociferous Keystone statesmen. From

A YOUNG EAGLE WAS SET FREE, and had it done its whole duty it would, of course, have perched upon the nation's chief executive. But he was paying no atburt, it alighted instead on an awning, from which it was soon rescued by a small boy. After Uncle Sam's soldiers and sailors had passed, came little Delaware's show.

Then Governor Beaver and Adjutant General Hastings, followed by the Governor's brilliant staff, came under the arch, accom-panied by continual cheering. The Penn-sylvanians called both the Governor and the General by name, several times, and once more spelled the name of the Com-monwealth in their loudest and most staccato tones.

The Sheridan Troop, from Tyrone, and the old City Troop, of Philadelphia, followed. Then-came General Hartrantt, who was heartily cheered, and his staff. Gover-nor Beaver acknowledged the applause and nor Beaver acknowledged the appliance and the waving of handkerchiefs by raising his hat and bowing as he passed along, but Generals Hastings and Hartranft sat mo-tionless on their horses, in deference to the ethics of military discipline. General Gobin and some of the colonels of the Pennsylvania division acknowledged the cheers that greeted them with a military

EQUAL TO ANY OF THEM. In the rear of the first brigade marched the Quay Invincibles, of Philadelphia, an independent company of colored men whose fine military bearing won them a generous share of the applause that was being lavishly dealt out. The Eighteenth and the Fourteenth regiments were equal to any of the crack regiments in line, in the precision and regularity of their movements.

Just opposite to where the Legislators sat the double tracks of the street lines extended obliquely across the street. These proved a serious obstacle to the soldiers, and in the great majority of instances destroyed the regularity of their lines. The tracks interfered just as much with the regulars as with the State troops, and, if it is any satisfaction to the latter to know it, they crossed this piece of ground in no worse shape than Uncle Sam's soldiers, and the Pennsylvania troops, if anything, averaged better

The most regular lines in the United States display were those of the boys from the schoolship. The Legislators were quite generous in their applause. CLEVELAND'S CHEERFUL SMILE.

President Cleveland relapsed into an engaging smile, as cheerful as it was ex-The 13 Governors of the 13 original States were applauded as they appeared, each at the head of the military display of his State, Governor Fitzhugh Lee and Governor Hill probably honored more than all those in the list who came after Governor Benver, but the heartiest applause was reserved for Governor Foraker, of Ohio. When be came in sight at the head of the Ohio troops, the Pennsylvania Legislators nearly went wild. They cheered, spelled the name of their State to him and spelled the name of their State for him, and right, until he had passed out of sound of their voices and into the other storm of cheers that greeted him all along his way. It seemed to please him immensely, and he bowed to the right hand and the left, almost to his saddle bow. His movements were free and graceful, and quite a contrast to the stately, dignified manners of Governor Gordon, of Georgia, and Governor Lee. DRESS UNIFORMS HAVE A BOOM.

Battery B brought up the rear of the Pennsylvania twops, and looked as ready for active and instant warfare as did the whole division. But the heavy marching order of the Keystone State militia was in such sharp contrast to the holiday attire of all the other troops, the regulars not excep-ted, that the Legislators ised almost like voting the money for dress uniforms right

It was noticeable to day that the Pennsylvania Legislature did not tell the populace of New York and the visitors who George Washington was. The reason was that a band of cadets paused right in front of their grand stand early this forencon and gave away the iffiormation. Legislator Fow, who always leads the choras, felt much hurt by the circumstance, and for a time could hardly be restrained from throwing away the red, white and blue hatchet ing away the red, white and blue hatchet he had purchased to beat time with.
